American officials reacted calmly yesterday to Soviet Premier Aleksei N. Kosygin's quoted warning that "you've left us no alternative but to fight—to go in there (Viet-Nam) with everything we have."

The warning was delivered in the months ahead, and to the American people by deliver military equipment to Cyrus E. Eaton, 81-year-old North Viet-Nam, but they Ohio industrialist, after a doubt that Russia will become meeting last week with Kosy directly involved in the fight-gin and other officials in Mos- ing.

American officials expect message was intended for the Russia to follow a very American public as part of the line toward the United S Moscow propaganda line, which has grown increasingly hard of late. No similar message has been sent officially, it was said on good authority. Eaton did not make a report on his talk with Kosygin and other leaders either to the American Embassy in Moscow or to the State Department, officials here said.

War Stirs No U.S. Alarm

They have sent a copy of Eaton's remarks, as reported in the press yesterday, to the Embassy for comment.

The surface-to-air missiles which Russia promised Viet-Nam at least two months ago and probably as early as February are expected to be installed in the Hanoi region soon.

It was reported here in mid-April that the Soviet Union had begun installation of the SAM weapons at Hanoi. It was expected then that they might be operational within a short time.

Moscow propaganda, which has vigorously attacked the United States over Viet-Nam for months, has only recently attacked President Johnson personally.

There is evidence that the Soviet leaders are genuinely baffled and disturbed by the President, whom they regarded as a "soft-liner" only a few months ago, when he was issuing invitations to Soviet leaders and proclaiming a new era of peace.

Then came the air raids on North Viet-Nam—started when Kosygin was in Hanoi—and the intervention in the Dominican Republic.
